The Faculty of History

The History Faculty's 100 academic staff (teaching officers employed by either the University or the Colleges) constitute one of the largest and best history departments in the world. Times Higher Education ranked Cambridge History third in the world and first in the UK in the Times Educational Supplement World University Rankings 2021 – measures of both quality and depth. The Faculty was ranked first in subject in the Guardian 2020 guide and the Complete University Guide 2021. In the 2021 Research Excellence Framework (REF) the Faculty submitted the work of 135 historians. In terms of 'research power' (GPA x FTE), it ranked second in the sector. 46% of the Faculty's research was judged 4* ('world leading') and 34% as 3* ('internationally excellent'). Some 600 undergraduates study a single Honours degree in History or joint Honours degrees in either History & Politics or History & Modern Languages.

In October 2022, the Faculty launched a new first and second-year undergraduate programme (Parts Ia and Ib of the History Tripos), which represents a significant modernisation of our curriculum and an opportunity to innovate and diversify in terms of content.

Over 100 MPhil students each year take one of the Faculty's eight MPhil programmes, and there are around 300 PhD students.

James Stirling's History Faculty Building (1968) is 'listed' as architecturally significant. The Stirling building will soon be vacated to allow for a full refurbishment. The Seeley Library (which houses 100,000 volumes) has temporarily moved into a dedicated and newly designed space in the West Room within the University Library until building work is completed.

The Faculty has more than thirty specialist research seminars and is divided into eight Subject Groups: American; Ancient and Medieval; Economic and Social; Early Modern; Modern British and Irish; Modern European; Political Thought and Intellectual History; and World. All staff members belong to one or more Subject Groups.

The School of Humanities and Social Sciences

The School of Humanities and Social Sciences is, in terms of student numbers, the largest of the six Schools in the University and is currently comprised of:

- Faculty of History
- Faculty of Economics
- Faculty of Education
- Faculty of Law
- Faculty of Human, Social and Political Science, which is made up of:

 - Centre of South Asian Studies
 - Centre for Gender Studies
- Faculty of Law, including the Institute of Criminology and the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law

The geographical range is equally broad, with Centres of African, Latin American and South Asian Studies, and specialists within each Department or Faculty. Each institution has its own research profile. The University

The University of Cambridge is consistently ranked one of the best universities in the world, achieving academic excellence through its Faculties, Departments and other Institutions, together with the 31 Colleges.

The University is renowned for its record of discovery and innovation. It is one of the great institutions, with a regional, national and global reach, attracting the very best and brightest minds. Our staff and students shape the world around us for the better: we attract and partner with like-minded people.

Whether contributing to the development of new anti-cancer drugs, adding to the understanding of how black holes are formed, revolutionising the study of ancient settlements, convening academic expertise to offer solutions to the climate crisis, or analysing public attitudes towards democracy around the world, the University's research is remarkable in its breadth, quality and impact. The University also sits at the heart of Europe's largest technology cluster and has catalysed more than 1,500 high-tech companies. And yet what inspires our 24,000 students and 13,000 staff is not what has already been achieved, but what is possible in the future.

The education and experience of our students, based on a partnership between the University's academic Departments and Faculties and the 31 Colleges, is second to none. Every student is a member of one of the Colleges, each a community of students, academics and staff drawn from across the University's comprehensive range of subject areas.

The University is a self-governing community, with a system for decision-making that provides a high degree of accountability and transparency to its members. Each Department and Faculty is part of one of six academic Schools, but each of them, and each individual academic, has a great deal of autonomy. The Colleges are independent and self-governing, working in a symbiotic relationship with the University.

The University has a number of Institutions that are independent of any Faculty or Department and are not part of the academic Schools. These include the Institute of Continuing Education (which provides high-quality education to adults throughout their lives), the Fitzwilliam Museum, Kettle's Yard (an historic house and gallery that holds important collections of modern art) and the University Library. In addition to their diverse contributions to University and public life, these non-School Institutions are also important centres of teaching and research.

Cambridge University Press & Assessment provides academic publishing, examinations and learning materials worldwide, supporting the dissemination of research, academic development at school and in higher education, and international student mobility. Legally, the Press & Assessment is a department of the University. It provides very important funds to invest in the academic purposes of the University.

The University has made truly remarkable contributions to the sum of human understanding, with breakthrough ideas and discoveries that have changed the way we understand ourselves, our planet, and the universe around us. Yet the global and national contexts in which it operates are fast-changing and increasingly filled with uncertainty. In a world that is becoming - politically, economically, socially, and technologically – ever more interconnected but even less equal, the University's mission – “to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence” – has never been more relevant.

About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country's highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit undergraduate students, provide student accommodation and pastoral support and deliver small group teaching for undergraduates.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany's Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University's make-up.

“Through its outstanding education, research and innovation, the University of Cambridge has made – and continues to make – a lasting contribution to human knowledge and is flourishing. By working at the University of Cambridge, you will be joining a vibrant community of students, scholars and professional services staff committed to supporting and enhancing the University's mission to contribute to society.”

*Professor Deborah Prentice,
Vice Chancellor 2023*
